Course Descriptions:

BINT1000 International Trade Finance 42.0 Hours

This is a course about taking advantage of the opportunities created by the emergence of a global economy and managing the risks of globalization. The objective of the course is to examine financial management models of cash flow, with an emphasis on foreign processes. Furthermore, it explores the implications of balance of payments, interest rates, and inflation rates on foreign exchange rates, as well as the implications of foreign exchange risk on investment decisions.

BINT1001 The Global Marketplace 42.0 Hours

This course provides a review of the essential elements of conducting business on an international scale. Topics include world geography and geopolitical systems, modes of entry, theories of international business, cross-cultural issues, the legal environment, the multinational corporation, functional management and operational concerns of business in the international arena.

BINT1002 International Human Resources Management 42.0 Hours

This course provides you with an opportunity to explore international human resource practices. You will develop an understanding of the differences between domestic and international human resource management, with specific emphasis on international recruitment and selection, performance management, training and development, compensation, the expatriation process, international labour relations, union concerns, and current issues and trends in international human resources.

BINT1004 Global E-Commerce 42.0 Hours

Worldwide online trade will grow dramatically as companies construct cyber locations around the world. Businesses conducting global e-commerce must take into account differences in culture, language, currency, exchange rates, and technological communications. In this course, you will critically examine what globalization means for e-commerce, learn how trade policies work in a global e-commerce marketplace, and study issues related to the use of internet technology as an enabler to perform international business functions.

BINT1005 International Trade Research 42.0 Hours

Successful marketing in international trade depends on developing an in-depth understanding of target markets. In this course, you will use information systems and sources to conduct market intelligence analysis for the introduction and marketing of a real product or service for the global economy. The objective of the course is to prepare an international trade research paper that demonstrates the ability to plan the research process, collect and interpret data.

BINT1006 Strategic Management of International Operations 42.0 Hours

This course critically examines the generic and functional strategies open to multinational enterprises; you will test the applicability of these concepts to actual situations. This course includes a computer simulation to provide you with first-hand experience in operating a business.

BINT1007 Global Entrepreneurship 42.0 Hours

This course will provide you with an overview of international trade management and trade rules. In addition, you will learn how to manage the import/export process, international innovation, assets, risks and negotiations abroad. You will develop a foreign market entry strategy for a specific product or service using computer simulated negotiation software, which will further develop your management skills.

BINT1009 Global Logistics and Operations 42.0 Hours

This course focuses on both strategic and tactical issues in international operations management, including capacity planning, materials management, modes of transportation, Incoterms, supply chain management and global sourcing and manufacturing.

BINT1010 International Marketing Management 42.0 Hours

This course is an advanced study of the international marketing function. You will work on an international marketing project. You will develop the framework, gather the necessary information and data, undertake the necessary marketing analysis, summarize your findings and make the necessary recommendations.

BINT1011 Advanced Global Strategy 42.0 Hours

This course focuses on how strategy is developed and turned into action. Acting as a general manager, who has cross functional responsibilities as well as national boundaries, you will conduct an analysis of an international business opportunity and/or challenge and develop an international business plan.

BINT1012 Internship (International Business) 520.0 Hours

The International Business Internship is designed to provide you with an experiential learning opportunity and exposure to prospective employers. Client companies will be provided with research and trade development services.
